About the authors

Sara Alaviyeh teaches Tourism Management at Western Community College and holds a Master's degree in Hospitality and Tourism Management from Fairleigh Dickinson University, Vancouver Campus. She brings over eight years of industry experience in tourism marketing, travel planning, and international tour operations. Her work integrates academic research with industry practice, with research interests in sustainable tourism, destination resilience, and the socio-cultural dimensions of tourism development.

Dr. Alex Abramovich is a Senior Scientist at the Institute for Mental Health Policy Research, where he leads the 2SLGBTQ+ Youth Health and Homelessness Research Lab. He is an Associate Professor at the University of Toronto and holds a Canada Research Chair in 2SLGBTQ+ Youth Homelessness and Mental Health. His program of research focuses on reducing health and social inequities experienced by 2SLGBTQ+ individuals. This has led to groundbreaking practice and policy reforms, including the launch of Canada's first dedicated transitional housing program for 2SLGBTQ+ youth, and has informed policy development across all levels of government.

Dr Mehmood Chadhar is an Information Systems scholar whose research focuses on the adoption, governance and organisational impact of emerging technologies, including blockchain, enterprise systems and artificial intelligence. His work examines how organisations create value through technology implementation, post-implementation learning and digital transformation. He has published extensively in peer-reviewed international journals and conferences, with strong citation. Dr Chadhar also supervises doctoral researchers and collaborates internationally on projects exploring AI governance, digital resilience and responsible technology innovation.

Shimul Chowdhury holds a MSc in Hospitality Management Studies, and an MBS in Accounting. His work explores governance, sustainability, and ethical leadership within tourism and hospitality systems. He is particularly interested in how hospitality environments intersect with broader social justice concerns, including vulnerability, inequality, and family violence in tourism contexts. Drawing on international professional experience across Canada, the UK, and Bangladesh, he integrates financial accountability with responsible management practices. His interdisciplinary perspective emphasizes transparent systems, organisational resilience, and ethical decision-making in addressing complex social challenges within tourism and hospitality sectors.

Nicole Elkington is a Research Coordinator at the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health (CAMH) working in the 2SLGBTQ+ Youth Health and Homelessness Research Lab. Her research interests include better understanding the experiences of homelessness among 2SLGBTQ+ individuals, the impact of mulmultiple marginalised identities on being unhoused, and how data can be used to impact policy and practice.

Dr. Basel El-Khodary is an Associate Professor of Psychology and the Dean of the Faculty of Education at The Islamic University of Gaza (IUG), Palestine. His research focuses on the effect of exposure to war-traumatic events on children. His expertise centres on the developmental psychopathology of children of war and its relationship with posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD), anxiety, and depression. Dr. Basel has a PhD in Psychology, a Master's degree in Community Mental Health, a Postgraduate Diploma of Community Mental Health, and a Bachelor of Arts majoring in Counselling.

Dr Nadia Faisal is a researcher in IT with over 5 years of teaching experience in Information Systems and Business Analytics. Her research centres on the ethical, social and governance dimensions of AI. She has published conference and journal papers examining the dark side of AI, including technology-facilitated harm and accountability frameworks. Nadia is currently contributing to a large-scale Asia-Pacific digital curriculum audit project by RMIT and leads a collaborative research initiative with Zayed University developing an ethics-informed framework for responsible AI system design, integrating moral principles into AI governance and socio-technical architectures.

Dr Alan Labas is a senior lecturer (Management) in the Institute of Innovation, Science and Sustainability, Federation University Australia, and is a member of the Future Regions Research Centre. Alan's research interest is in knowledge management with an emphasis on business advisory knowledge transmission. He pursues collaborative cross disciplinary studies and has produced tourism, marketing, education and event management research.

Dr Samreen Mahmood is a lecturer and researcher in Information Technology and Business Analytics with extensive experience across Australian and international higher education institutions. Her research focuses on digital resilience, cybersecurity, socio-technical systems, and the broader societal impacts of emerging technologies. She has published in leading Q1 and Q2 journals and has contributed to interdisciplinary research examining complex social and technological challenges. Dr Mahmood brings a multidisciplinary perspective to her work, integrating technology, management, and social impact research to address contemporary global issues.

Dr Gina Masterton completed her law degree in 2000, her Master of Laws in 2016 and her PhD on the Hague Child Abduction Convention in 2022. She has worked as a lawyer and legal professional in Brisbane and Los Angeles for 18 years and as an academic researcher and educator for 9 years. Dr Masterton is an advocate for women and children and works to protect and advance civil and human rights worldwide.

Hiran Roy is an Associate Professor and holds a PhD in Management from the University of Canterbury, New Zealand. Prior to joining academia, he worked for over 26 years as an executive chef on different continents. He is a recipient of a New Zealand Commonwealth Scholarship and Fellowship Plan Awardee. His research interests include sustainable local food systems, city branding, consumer behaviour, organisational behaviour, CSR, neurodiversity inclusiveness, green HRM, and sustainability. His work has been published in top-tier academic journals and chapters with leading academic publishers.

Professor Muthanna Samara is Professor of Psychology at Kingston University London and an internationally recognised researcher in developmental psychopathology. His work focuses on bullying and cyberbullying, trauma and post-traumatic stress, prematurity and the mental health and wellbeing of children and adolescents, particularly those affected by war, displacement, and adversity. He also works on the development of innovative virtual reality interventions aimed at promoting mental health, coping, and resilience in children and young people. He is a Chartered Psychologist, an Associate Fellow of the British Psychological Society and has a substantial international portfolio of research, publications and funded projects.

Michael Silberberg is a Research Analyst in the 2SLGBTQ+ Youth Health and Homelessness Research Lab at the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health (CAMH). He recently graduated from Queen's University with a Bachelor of Science in Psychology, and is passionate about engaging in research which works to bolster 2SLGBTQ+ communities by addressing pressing social inequities, and fostering positive change.

Dr Rodney Westerlaken is a Postdoctoral Researcher and Senior Lecturer at NHL Stenden University of Applied Sciences in the Netherlands, and Founder of the Westerlaken Foundation in Indonesia. His research focuses on tourism crises, social resilience, family violence, and community well-being in tourism-dependent societies, with a particular emphasis on Bali. He leads a longitudinal study (2020–2030) examining the socio-economic and social consequences of tourism collapse during and after COVID-19. Rodney is Editor-in-Chief of Research in Hospitality Management and has published widely on tourism, child welfare, sustainability, and crisis response. His work integrates academic research with community-based interventions.

Elisa Zentveld, PhD is a Professor of Social Justice at Federation University. She serves on the editorial board of 11 leading tourism journals and is the Associate Editor of the journal Tourism and Hospitality. She has received 14 awards to recognise her outstanding contributions to research and education. Her main research interests are Visiting Friends and Relatives (VFR) travel, family tourism, and family violence. She is currently ranked number one in the world for VFR travel research, based on both the volume of publications and citations.
